Littleton, Colorado: Our National Agony with Gun Violence Continues...

This time in an upscale Denver suburb. Two 11th grade students used an array of weapons in a well-planned attack on fellow students: assault weapons, handguns and 30 explosive devices. The tally since 1996: there have been 9 "school incidents" killing 35 people, mostly children and wounding up to 62.

We will hear the usual arguments that the perpetrators were disturbed youngsters; that these are isolated incidents; that guns don't kill, people do; and that we must protect our 2nd Amendment rights.

Events such as this brought immediate and significant action in the Scotland and Australian massacres in previous years. By contrast, in the United States there is an unwillingness to confront the real problems. Instead, we are offered "solutions" such as: making schools safe by installing metal detectors, having armed guards (there was one at Littleton) or arming the teachers (advises John Lott — see article, "Who is John Lott?" on page 4). However, America's love affair with guns is killing her children and continues to put them at risk on a daily basis.

In the wake of the tragedy, the NRA scaled back its annual convention held in Denver the last week of April. Colorado is considered NRA territory and it has lobbied for three major bills in the state legislature: a strong state preemption law, a concealed weapons law and a law prohibiting local JUNK GUNS: GOING.....GOING..... ALMOST GONE!

The Santa Barbara City Council voted unanimously on March 16, 1999 (with one absentee) to ban the sale of so-called junkguns in Santa Barbara. Santa Barbara Women Against Gun Violence and its coalition members have been working for passage of this ordinance for over two years. In 1997 and 1998 we proposed that the Santa Barbara City Council and the County Board of Supervisors adopt resolutions supporting the state legislature bills banning the sale and manufacture of junk guns, which they did. When Governor Pete Wilson vetoed these and other gun bills, the City Council decided it was time to join the growing number of public officials around the state and nation taking action on issues related to gun proliferation and violence. Councilmember Marty Blum took the initiative in steering the ordinance along.

In addition to the initial presentation to the council, there were two meetings of the ordinance committee at which our organization and supporters gave presentations. During the initial presentation Councilman Tom Roberts commented, "I just don't see the nexus between banning the legal sale of these weapons and stopping them from getting into the hands of criminals." Then on February 21st the ATF study was released stating that 51% of guns used in crimes are purchased legally and Councilman Roberts quipped that the study had shot a big hole in his argument. The final meeting on March 16th was well-attended and a dramatic moment occurred when Michael Purvis, our legislative chair, asked supporters of the ban to stand and we nearly filled the room. There was silence for a moment as we all stood in unison. Later, Mayor Miller announced the final unanimous vote and the cheering could be heard on State Street.

Some interesting comments by council members at these meetings:

A Personal Note About Littleton, Colorado

by Toni Wellen

A friend and business associate of ours lives in Littleton, Colorado with his wife and children, three blocks from Columbine High School. On that dreadful Tuesday we telephoned him to ascertain whether his family was safe. We subsequently learned that his oldest son's middle school graduating class was going on a field trip that very day to the ill-fated high school, as an orientation for their Fall entry. On Tuesday after breakfast the boy became ill, too ill to attend school and accompany his classmates on the field trip. His classmates were in the cafeteria when the assault occurred and one of them, a close pal of our friend's son, was wounded in the shoulder and chest. He will live, and there will be scars from his wounds, but what are the emotional scars? These children have physical wounds, but in a sense all the school children of America now live with fear and anxiety, hidden for some and obvious for others. Could it happen here? Am I safe at my school? Who at my school could do this?

My friend tells me that now when children enter any school in Littleton, the school is "locked down" and armed guards are standing sentry at the doors. Our friend's middle school child "appears to be O.K." but his 12-year-old brother is afraid and anxious.

We are told by the gun owners that guns make us safe. Is a fearful anxious child safe? Some want teachers to carry guns and all "law-abiding" citizens to be able to carry concealed guns. Would a child feel safe knowing that teachers or anyone around him or her is carrying a gun? What sort of mentality is this promoting? What is happening to our country? America stands for democracy and freedom. The right to feel free and safe. People from all over the world have wanted to emigrate to America to enjoy the right to be free. So what is freedom now for a child in America? Hiding behind guards with guns in schools with metal detectors and wondering who has a concealed gun? A child in Kosovo doesn't feel safe, and now neither does a child in Littleton, or Chicago or possibly even Santa Barbara.

officials from suing gun manufacturers. These bills have been tabled by State Rep. McPherson who said, "Now is just not the time to debate these bills."

Response from two presidential candidates: George W. Bush offered the opinion that love not gun control is the best way to prevent shooting sprees like the one in Colorado. Dan Quayle said, "I hope we don't try to use this as an excuse to go and take away guns."

We suggest the explosive proliferation of guns and the incredible amount of media violence children of all ages are exposed to daily are critical issues our nation must face.

UNTHINKABLE.... No Longer

Why not ban handguns? This was the title of an editorial in the Washington Post National Weekly edition May 3, 1999, boldly stating their editorial stance. A challenge from a reputable publication to the President of the United States and all other presidential candidates to ban the general sale, manufacture and ownership of handguns. There are over 60 million handguns now in private hands and the number grows. Add to the massacre in Columbine the 13 children who die every day in America from gun violence. As the Washington Post National Weekly states on its cover sheet: "WHEN WILL WE EVER LEARN?"

Guns Used In Littleton Massacre Bought At Gun Show

Investigators of the Columbine High School massacre believe two Savage Arms Inc. shotguns were bought at a Denver area gun show within the past six months by a female acquaintance of one of the two teenagers involved in the shootings. The other guns used, a Navagar TEC-DC9, a 9mm semiautomatic assault pistol (manufacture federally banned in 1994) and a Hi-Point Firearms, Inc. 9mm carbine rifle were initially bought from two separate Denver gun dealers within the past 18 months by someone over 21 years of age.

The American Shooting Sports Council, a gun-industry trade group announced that it "supports the concept of a background check and paper trail for those individuals purchasing firearms at gun shows". (Wall Street Journal 4-26-99)

A VIRTUAL GUN SHOW

Forty percent of guns are bought from sources other than retail outlets. The Internet is a burgeoning source of firearms — including machine guns, ammunition and accessories. As one site called "Guns-Unlimited" described, the Internet is fast becoming a "virtual gun show."

Kristen Rand, author of the 1996 study Gun Shows in America: Tupperware® Parties for Criminals, hailed President Clinton's call for stricter regulation of gun shows, "Thanks to legal loopholes created by the gun lobby, gun shows are Tupperware® for criminals. The President's leadership can help close those loopholes and meeting his goal of "no background check, no sale."

Human Relations Commission Takes the Initiate in Passing County Ban for Junk Gun Sales

It began when Mary O’Gorman and Bob Hamilton attended our 4th Annual Dinner and decided that the issue of gun violence was central to safety in the community and required some action by the Human Relations Commission. Mary, a consultant to the commission — and Bob, a commission member, decided to encourage the commission to recommend to the County Board of Supervisors that it pass an ordinance banning the sale of junk guns in Santa Barbara. SBWAGV became involved when the item first appeared on a commission agenda. Perhaps no one was prepared for the vociferous, contentious and combative attitude of a majority of the opposition, but it was an eye-opener. During one meeting some members of the opposition became loud, abusive and out of control. At the final meeting sheriff deputies had to be present. After three meetings held by the commission in Santa Barbara and one in Santa Maria, the final meeting was held on March 18th, but the outcome was not predictable.

The vote was tied until Grace Florez, Commission Chair, cast the deciding vote in favor of the motion to recommend to the Board of Supervisors that junk gun sales be banned. A report and recommendation will now go to the County Board of Supervisors. A public hearing is scheduled May 18th. See box below for information.

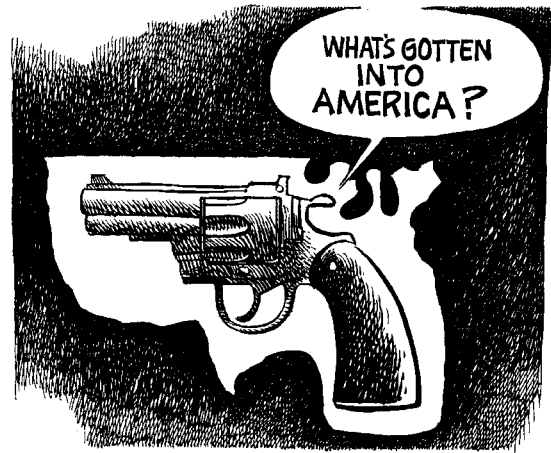

But we still need you...

Those of you who missed the live drama there is still time. The County will hold a public hearing on the proposed junkgun ban ordinance some time in May. It is critically important for YOU to be there and show your concern for gun violence in our community. Your County Supervisors need to SEE their constituents supporting gun control. The opposition is extremely well organized and attends these meetings in large numbers. We need your presence and your support.

If you would like to speak at the County hearing but are not sure what to say, we can help you, please call 564-6803.

Hearing time will be set on May 13th. Please call the Clerk of the Board of Supervisors at 568-2240 for the precise time.

MIKE PETERS ♦ DAYTON DAILY NEWS

We Couldn't Have Done It Without You !!

Santa Barbara Women Against Gun Violence extends thanks and appreciation to each person who attended meetings at the Santa Barbara City Council and the Board of Supervisors Human Relations Commission. Your presence as well as your words made a difference in helping the enactment process of important legislation banning sales of junk guns and in demonstrating that sensible gun control has support in this community. It wasn't easy listening to the opposition's arguments, but it was educational!

Thanks also to the supportive public officials on the City Council and Human Relations Commission. Special thanks to Eli Langer, City Council Member, for appearing before the Human Relations Commission to request their support of a county ordinance. A round of applause for Bob Hamilton, Human Relations Commissioner and Mary O’Gorman, consultant to the commission, who brought the matter of a junk gun sale ban to the commission and persevered with such elegance against vociferous odds. Grace Florez, Chair of the Human Relations Commission, was in a word FANTASTIC!! She handled the contentious and oftentimes unruly opposition with perfect aplomb. Way to go Grace!

We also thank the news media for generally excellent coverage. Most especially, thanks to the Santa Barbara News Press and John Lankford, Editorial Page Editor for thoughtful editorials and creating an open forum to exchange views. As important as passing the ban is the community dialogue that continues in our local newspapers, TV and radio. An important goal of SBWAGV is to raise awareness and educate the community regarding critical issues surrounding guns and violence.

THE CONCEALED WEAPONS DEBATE

Missouri Votes “No” on Concealed Weapons

When Jesse James was a notorious outlaw, Missouri got tough on gunslings and banned concealed weapons. The NRA wants to repeal that ban more than a century later.

Supporters said gun-packing law-abiding people would keep the criminals guessing. The NRA spent $3.7 million — nearly six dollars for every yes vote and five times the opposition’s entire budget. Yet Proposition B, which would have lifted the ban, failed 52% to 48% in a vote April 6, 1999.

Critics of the measure said Proposition B would have put more guns on the streets and would lead to more firearm violence. So the reasoning, more guns create more gun violence has not changed in over 100 years...in Missouri anyway. Harry Wiggins, a state senator from Kansas City said, “Missourians have said they do not want guns carried into football games, and bars and schools.”

Texas Retrospective: Concealed Weapons Facilitate Crimes!

Arrests of Texans licensed to carry concealed weapons have risen sharply in the third year since the licensing law took effect. According to a study performed by the Violence Policy Center, using data from the Texas Department of Public Health, there have been over 2,000 arrests of Texas concealed handgun license holders — an average of nearly two arrests a day over three years.

The report, released March 22, 1999, listed these crimes for which license holders were arrested: 15 charges of murder or attempted murder, 6 charges of kidnapping or false imprisonment, 28 charges of rape or sexual assault, 103 charges of assault or aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, 442 charges of driving while intoxicated, 30 charges of indecency with children, 140 drug-related charges, 70 charges of sexual misconduct.

“When the gun lobby pushed this law through, they promised it would not arm the bad guys. They now owe us 2,000 explanations,” said VPC policy Analyst Susan Glick, the study’s author. “If legislators had realized how many murderers and sex offenders would carry concealed handguns, this law would never have passed....All too often, concealed handgun license holders don’t stop crimes, they commit them. This is proof positive of the dangers of concealed handgun laws.”

The Colorado legislature, which has been considering and strongly favoring a concealed weapon law, has tabled all gun legislation in the wake of the Littleton massacre. A tragic wake-up call?

Who is John Lott ??

Author of “More Guns, Less Crime” John Lott, a Fellow at the University of Chicago Law School, says his research shows that criminals prey on people who they think are defenseless. “Some criminals are going to think twice if they have to wonder whether a potential victim is carrying a gun.”

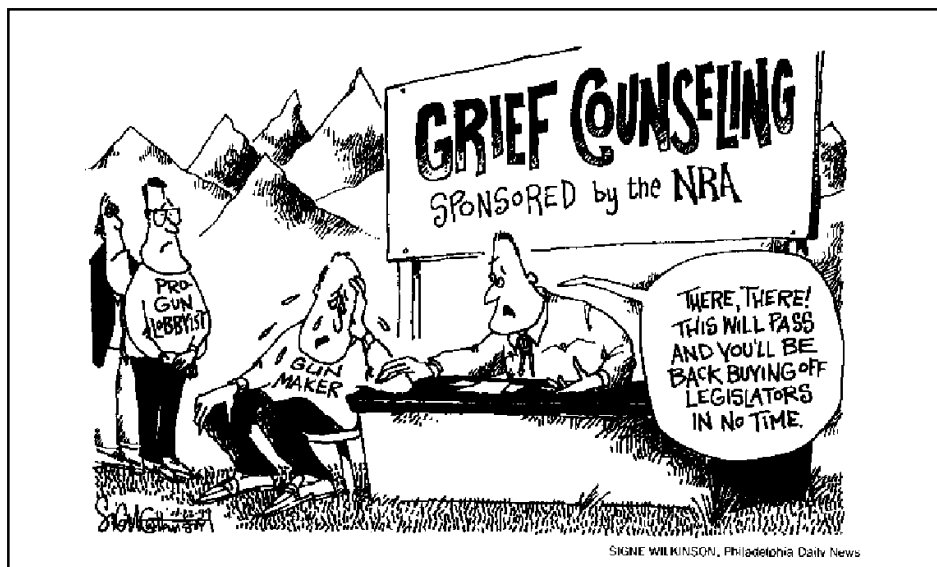

In the wake of the March 1998 schoolyard ambush of children by children in Jonesboro, Arkansas, Lott voiced his strong support for arming teachers and other school personnel against gun-toting children. Lott argues, “Allowing teachers and other law-abiding adults to carry concealed handguns in schools would not only make it easier to stop shootings in progress, it could also help deter shootings from ever occurring.”

The gun lobby frequently quotes John Lott and his theories that there is a reduction in overall crime in those states which permit concealed handgun ownership. Some 31 states provide concealed weapons permits to people who meet certain objective standards, like age and background checks. About half of these states require no gun training. Another dozen states allow public officials to issue permits to people who show a need for them.

Lott’s studies have been criticized by reliable statisticians for faulty methodology. Further, the Lott study deals only with trends for overall crime (which could be subject to other factors), not numbers of deaths. Interestingly, there are significant links between the John M. Olin Foundation, which funded Lott’s fellowship at the University of Chicago, and the Olin Corporation, which owns Winchester Ammunition (the largest producer of ammunition in the U.S. and the manufacturer of the infamous “Black Talon” bullet). Winchester Ammunition stands to reap financial gain from the increased sale of handgun ammunition generated by the passage of lax concealed weapons laws. At the time of the release of the Lott study, former Olin Corporation executives continued to serve on the Olin Foundation’s board of directors.

Important Bills in the State Legislature

• AB202 One-Handgun-Per-Month— Assemblyman Wally Knox (D-Los Angeles). Passed the Assembly 4-23-99 by a bare majority. Current law places no limit on the number of handguns that can be purchased at one time. Gun traffickers are able to buy handguns in bulk and resell them to criminals and juveniles on the street. This bill would prohibit the purchase of more than one handgun in any 30-day period. In California, 11 percent of those who buy handguns purchase more than one every month. Of 158,000 legal handgun sales in 1998, 40,000 were part of multiple gun transactions.

• SB23 Assault Weapons and Magazines— Sen. Don Perata (D-Alameda) This bill which would prohibit so-called copy-cat weapons by adding a generic definition of semiautomatic guns (guns that have one or more military characteristics) just squeaked through the Senate Public Safety Committee. The bill would also prohibit the sale or transfer of ammunition magazines that can hold more than ten rounds. Current owners would be able to keep their assault weapons if they registered them by a new deadline.

• SB 15 Ban Saturday Night Specials — Sen. Richard Polanco (D-Los Angeles) Current law does not set any safety or quality standards for handguns This law, (essentially the same as SB 1500, which passed the legislature but was vetoed by then-Gov. Wilson) would establish two basic safety standards and minimal size requirements for handguns made and sold in California. The safety standards are based on tests developed by the National Institute of Justice's Office of Science and Technology for use by law enforcement — a drop test and a 600 round firing performance test. The minimal size requirements are taken from the 1968 federal import standard — 4 1/2-inch overall length and 3-inch barrel length for revolvers, and 6-inch length with a 4-inch height for pistols.

• AB106 Child-Safety Locks— Assemblyman Jack Scott (D-Los Angeles). Current law does not require that guns be sold with any child-safety devices. This bill would require gun dealers to sell an appropriate lock device with any firearm to help prevent a child or unauthorized user from being able to fire the gun.

• AB491 CCW Penalty Increase— Assemblyman Jack Scott. This law is a top priority of the California Police Chiefs. Whereas current law makes it a felony to carry brass knuckles, dirks, daggers, and other weapons, it is now only a misdemeanor to carry a concealed and/or loaded handgun without a license. This new law would make it either a felony or a misdemeanor, depending on the circumstances.

• AB17 Repeal State Preemption of Licensing and Registration Assemblymember Hannah-Beth Jackson (D-Santa Barbara) This bill which would allow local communities the freedom to craft local solutions to the gun violence in their areas. Current state law prevents this.

Hannah-Beth Jackson stated in an article (2/28/99) in the Santa Barbara News Press, "During recent election campaigns, the voters in the 35th Assembly District made it clear to me that they overwhelmingly support gun control as a means of decreasing the number of firearm-related deaths. The public is demanding that our leaders step in to craft solutions to reduce the level of gun violence destroying the fabric and peace of our society."

We are proud that Hannah-Beth was elected our representative. Now we must actively support her work on our behalf. Voice your support of these gun control measures to your Assemblymember and State Senator.

Youths Legally Bought Guns Used in Crimes How Guns Proliferate to Kids and Criminals

Fifty-one percent of guns used in crimes by juveniles and people ages 18 to 24 were acquired by intermediaries acting on behalf of the real buyer, according to a report released on February 21, 1999, by the Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms (ATF). The report announced the latest results of President Clinton's Youth Crime Gun Interdiction Initiative (YCBII), a program begun in 1996. In addition, 14% of guns used in crimes by juveniles and young people were sold by private sellers without federal firearm licenses and 10% were sold at gun shows, flea markets or through ads in gun magazines. None of these outlets require buyers to show ID or undergo background checks.

The report is the second major study by the ATF in the past two years that makes use of newly improved methods for tracing guns used in crimes. It reports on efforts to trace over 76,000 guns used in crime in 27 cities. As a result of these traces, 397 defendants have been referred for prosecution for gun trafficking in state and federal courts in the past year.

In the past, gun makers have argued, ostensibly with the support of law enforcement statistics, that most guns used in crimes were stolen rather than purchased new or nearly new by criminals. But the new report found that only 35% of guns used in crimes by juveniles had been stolen.

The ATF, under pressure from the National Rifle Association and Congress, had only a small program to trace guns used in crimes, until President Clinton took office, and few city police forces tried to find the sources of illegal guns.

On February 25, the Illinois Council Against Handgun Violence (ICHV) released a study based on data from the ATF, which stated that "Three California gun makers — Bryco, Lorcin and Davis — have flooded Chicago's streets with junk guns." In 1996 eight of the top ten guns most used and traced to crime were junk guns. Of those eight, six were made by the above manufacturers and are the fastest "time-to-crime" guns (i.e., from initial retail sale to recovery at a crime) recovered frequently from juveniles and youth.

Criminologists believe the intensified effort to trace guns is one of the factors that has helped drive crime rates down for seven straight years.

GUN DEALER SETTLES WITH CITY

April 13 - A Chicago gun dealer has reached a settlement with the city in a $433 million landmark lawsuit accusing the gun industry of flooding the streets with weapons deliberately marketed to criminals. Robert Taborden, owner of Bob's Sports headquarters in suburban Justice, is one of 40 gun dealers and manufacturers named in the lawsuit which officials expect to be a national test case. Similar lawsuits have been filed in New Orleans, Miami, Atlanta and Bridgeport, Conn.

As part of the agreement Taborden will cooperate in the ongoing investigation of the firearms industry and testify for the city and county when the case goes to trial. "We now have a witness who can give us an insider's account of the manner in which this industry knowingly markets illegal firearms in Chicago," said the city's Counsel Brian Crowe. In return, the city and county will drop all claims for damages against Taborden and his business.

Part of Chicago's case was built on evidence procured over a 3-month period, when the Chicago police department sent 2-person teams into 12 gun stores that ring the city. The agents brazenly spoke of planning to use the purchased guns for criminal purposes, but in every case the dealers sold the firearms.

Gun Makers on Legal Defensive

In a handgun-liability trial that ended February 9, 1999 in Brooklyn, the jurors' decision marks the first time that the firearms industry has been held legally responsible for the criminal use of guns. Plaintiffs' lawyers elicited testimony from experts to argue that handgun manufacturers should do more to ensure that weapons don't wind up in criminal hands. Defense lawyers for 25 gun makers answered with their own experts. The jurors ignored almost all of it and devised their own quirky formula to determine that 15 of the companies distributed handguns negligently and that three of them should pay damages of $520,000 to one plaintiff, a 19-year old boy with a bullet lodged in his brain. The six other plaintiffs, relatives of people killed by handguns, received no damages.

This was no slam-dunk verdict for the jurors who struggled for six days to reach consensus. After four days the exhausted jury pleaded for help from the judge. But Judge Jack Weinstein had no intention of allowing a hung jury and told them; "Everybody including yourselves has invested too much in this case to allow you to throw up your hands prematurely." One juror, a nurse, emerged as the most forceful personality on the jury. Her mantra: Gun companies have some general responsibility for the millions of weapons they produce. She referred to the testimony of two retired officials of the ATF who said that major channels for arming criminals are illicit sales at gun shows and dealers who operate out of garages (kitchen table dealers) or car trunks.

The jury agreed that companies should discourage sales at gun shows and by dealers who don't have stores, and assessed each defendant company under this basis. They agreed their method may have been simplistic but "it was the only thing we could come up with." They finally agreed to an overall award amount of $4 million.

Survey reveals NRA Out of Sync with Majority of Gun Owners

From The New England Journal of Medicine, Sept. 17, 1998: 68% of the American public favors "government safety regulations for the design of guns." Among gun owners, 64% agreed. 94% of the American public said domestically-manufactured handguns should be required to meet the same standards as foreign-made guns. Among gun owners 93% agreed.

NRA Tries to Prevent City Lawsuits

Encouraged by the impending passage of a bill to prevent gun lawsuits in Georgia, the NRA has succeeded in at least 10 states in getting legislation under way that would preclude local governments from suing gun manufacturers and distributors. A bill in Florida would make it a felony (up to 5 years in jail and $5,000 fine) for any local official to file such a lawsuit. Chief lobbyist for the NRA, James J. Baker, said, "The point is to try to get rid of suits that have been filed" and to target "as many as 25 or 30 states" where local officials are considering suing. The NRA is working only in states where there is a likelihood the governor would sign the legislation: Colorado is one of those states, as are Texas, Michigan, Kansas, Vermont, Wyoming, Louisiana, Minnesota, and Alabama. Republican Governor Jeb Bush of Florida has stated that in general he does not support cities suing gun makers.

Gun control activists have said some of the state bills are likely to be challenged in court, "We allow ordinary citizens and cities to assert their rights in court," said Dennis Henigan of the Center to Prevent Handgun Violence. The NRA has been working on "friendly" state legislatures to get bills passed that prohibited local communities from passing gun control statutes since the 1980's.

Gun Manufacturers Renege on Trigger Locks

A widely hailed voluntary agreement on trigger locks between the White House and the firearms industry has made virtually no difference in the way handguns are sold according to a report (11/98) by the Violence Policy Center. The agreement announced in October 1997 effectively killed federal legislation requiring safety devices.

The survey of 58 firearm distributors and dealers in 25 states found that 16 of the 20 handgun manufacturers that promised to include safety devices with their guns have apparently not done so. Three of the remaining four were already supplying the safety devices before the agreement was completed. Kirsten Rand, VPC Director of Federal Policy stated, "As soon as the public looked the other way, most handgun makers resumed business as usual."

"This is not an ordinance that's going to solve all our community problems, but I think it's a step in the right direction," said Elinor Langer. Gregg Hart remarked, "This started out as a symbolic issue that has grown from local to state to national."

One of the final speakers, Bruce Rittenhouse, a community activist, added a poignant note in his story about visiting a local gun store on two consecutive days where he saw two young boys who told him they went into the store every day to look at the guns.

In a reply to a SBWAGV congratulatory note, Gregg Hart said, "Thank you very much for the kind note of thanks for my vote in support of your proposal to ban the sale of 'Saturday Night Specials' in Santa Barbara. The thanks should go to you and your coalition members who took the initiative and pushed this important issue onto our agenda. History will show your effort and our support were the right thing to do. I'm proud to have helped in my own way." Thanks, Gregg and other City Council Members!

We hope the Santa Barbara Board of Supervisors will very soon follow the wise action of the City Council in banning junk gun sales.
